

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen the effectiveness of Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Since implementing the law the quality of life at our house has improved dramatically. Before implementation we would receive 5-6 calls every evening (usually during family dinners or family discussions) Now we rarely receive calls and when we ask for information from the callers they usually hang up. We now get calls only from those organizations that really could benefit from our participation (fop etc...) Please consider the quality of life issue and don't change our current happy condition. Thanks for your consideration.
